Please take a moment to fill out this form and leave it with a responsible person:

1. Number of people in your party?.....

2. Time of departure?.....

3. Intended route?.....

.....

4. Expected time of return?.....

5. Possible alternative route?.....

.....

6. Action you wish the responsible person to take should you not return by expected time?

.....

It is absolutely essential that you inform the note holder of your safe return at the end of your trip - otherwise the voluntary mountain rescue services may be alerted unnecessarily. Mobile phones can be useful but it is not always possible to get a signal. Mobiles phones are no substitute for planning and preparation.

Mountaineers should be independent, self-reliant and able to look after themselves. If you have to call for help, dial 999 and ask for the POLICE.

Please fold into an envelope and leave with a responsible person. Fold along this line first

The Clive campaign is an initiative set up by Rhoda Grant MSP and her staff in memory of their friend and former colleague Clive Dennier who loved the hills of the Highlands of Scotland. Clive was an experienced hill walker but went missing after going alone to the Knoydart area in North West Scotland.
